Greiz is the capital of the Greiz District, located on the Weiße Elster River, which starts its journey in the Czech Republic nearby. The town was founded in 1209, so the summer of 2009 marked its 800th anniversary.

Two singular palaces dominate the local architectural scene. Oberes Schloss, the Upper Castle, gives a daunting profile to the fifty-meter high hillside upon which it is perched. One of the castle's towers dates back to the town's founding, though most of the structure had to be rebuilt after a lightning strike and fire in 1540. Nowadays, apartments and museums occupy its many floors.

ABOUT THE AREA

The capital Greiz sits on this river which actually starts its journey in the Czech Republic. Its two great palaces Oberes Schloss and Unteres Schloss are considered unique in their design, as is much of the town itself.

Zeulenroda-Triebes in the mountains has a beautiful white town hall, and at its center you can enjoy a great park — known locally as the English Garden.

The Greiz District also has a rather different past, and in the town of Berga you can find and explore the 17 war-time Nazi ammunition tunnels. Not so awful in themselves, but they were carved out of the rocks by prisoners of war from the nearby Buchenwald Concentration Camp. You can visit the many museums surrounding this chapter of German history.

Thuringia, officially the Free State of Thuringia, is a state of Germany. Located in central Germany, it covers 16,171 square kilometres, being the sixth smallest of the sixteen German States. It has a population of about 2.1 million. Erfurt is the state capital and largest city.
