Jumilla is located in the province of Murcia, between the Mediterranean coast and the Castilla de La Mancha high, flat arid plains. The area is characterised by its wide valleys and high plains dotted with mountains at an altitude between 320 and 900m above sea level.

Jumilla specializes in wines based on the Monastrell grape variety, which accounts for around 80 percent of vines. It is Murcia's oldest region, established in 1966. Since the 1990s, when the region's potential to produce quality wines came to the fore, Jumilla has attracted a lot of outside attention. Producers from other Spanish regions as well as foreign companies have set up wineries here.
