The current municipality of Sátão, with an area of about 200km², includes nine parishes: Avelal, Ferreira de Aves, Mioma, Rio de Moinhos, S. Miguel de Vila Boa, Sátão, Silvã de Cima, Union of the parishes of Águas Boas and Forles and Union of the parishes of Romãs, Decermilo and Vila Longa.

The municipality of Sátão is part of the Demarcated Region of Dão, is furrowed by three rivers Vouga Sátão Côja originating from the Serra da Lapa and its foothills, running almost parallel, in an east-west direction and, incorporated by many longitudinal strips of very fertile land, it was constituted in 1834, with the union of six old municipalities, four of them dating back to Medieval times: Sátão, Ferreira de Aves, Gulfar and Rio de Moinhos and two, Silvã de Cima and Ladário to the sixteenth century.

The primitive municipality of Sátão is very old and had its first charter, granted by Count D. Henrique and his wife D.^a Teresa, on May 9, 1111, in the same year that the charter was also given to the city of Coimbra. It was the second Charter, or perhaps the first, granted in the whole of Beira Alta, only preceded by that of Mangualde (Azurara), and before the Charters of Viseu and all the other towns of the District.
