ABOUT THE AREA

Located in the heart of the Riviera between Nice and Cannes, five minutes from the Mediterranean, Biot holds incredible treasures. The city has a rich history of historical events (including Templars' stronghold). It enjoys a unique cultural and artistic heritage. The Musee National Fernand Léger, for example, is a prestigious witness. Today is the meeting place of some sixty artists from different disciplines (jewelers, glass blowers, potters, painters, illustrators, leather workers, blacksmiths, fresco) most of whom have their studios open to the public. Biot is also a paradise for the art of living. Many restaurants offer colors and flavors of Mediterranean cuisine. The sidewalk cafes are all invitations to relaxation and conviviality.

Biot is very pretty with quite an extensive historic centre lined with attractive houses and numerous small features to catch your attention.

Park in the car parks concealed down the hillside (les baches) and enter Biot along the Rue Saint Sebastien – a broad boulevard lined with attractive colourful houses, cafes, and lots of greenery. The tourist office is halfway along this street, and the old town is found at the far end of this road and contains many features and highlights to attract your attention as you explore.

The centre of Biot old town is the Place des Arcades (a narrow square with arcaded houses along both sides and the 15th century church at the end – be sure to go in the church to see the retable (altar painting) of the Virgin of the Rosary by 16th century artist Louis Brea.
