City area

Together with Zehlendorf, Steglitz can be described as Berlin's green lung. It is a very informal district with a good mix of age groups. Schlossstrasse is a real tourist magnet because it offers large and small shopping opportunities with the 'Schloss', the 'Schlossstrassen Centre', the 'Boulevard Berlin' and many retail outlets. A cultural highlight of the district is the Schlossparktheater, which is directed by Dieter Hallervorden. Volkspark Steglitz is a popular green space that offers plenty of room for jogging, relaxing, playing and picnics. Other special features for nature lovers include the Botanical Garden, the open-air museum 'Domane Dahlem' and the Peacock Island. Architecturally, the office building complex known as the 'Kreisel', the planetarium at the Insulaner and the 'Bierpinsel', a tower with a former restaurant in the style of pop architecture, are particularly interesting in Steglitz. Overall, Steglitz is recognisable as the original Berlin, which was not yet taken over by large, dominant skyscrapers.
