ABOUT THE AREA

Angeles is a city in the Philippines. Dotting the Santo Rosario District are period buildings, such as the colonial Holy Rosary Church, built in the late 19th century. Housed in a restored 1920s building, the Museo Ning Angeles explores local history. City landmarks include the opulent 1890s Pamintuan Mansion and the stone Founders' Residence, built in 1824. West of the city is the active volcano Mount Pinatubo.

Angeles City is perhaps most famous for its raucous nightlife, making it effectively the Sin City of the Philippines. However, that's not the only string to its bow. Particularly in downtown Angeles, away from the entertainment districts, you'll find a number of extraordinary historical places to visit. Some of the older buildings have been at the crossroads of the country's history and continue to stand the test of time.

The Clark Freeport area of the city, around the international airport, also has its share of interesting attractions. Most notable is the tax-free shopping that gives the area its name, but you'll also find some good golf courses and a couple of theme parks for the kids.

Nayong Pilipino is a kind of cultural theme park featuring replicas of historical places, houses of important leaders, and villages in the Philippines. Areas include Colonial Plaza, Hero's Plaza, Spanish Culture, Kalinga Village, Ifugao Village, Muslim Village, museums, and more. There's a good choice of handicraft stores throughout, making it a good spot for souvenir shopping.

Events and exhibitions are held at the park, and it's available for private functions. Overnight stays in cottages are even possible. The loud Filipino pop music playing throughout the park can get a little exhausting, though.
